Q.

Is there a true all-season jacket I can invest in?

A. Sure – behold the utility jacket. The outer layer will see you through those tricky transitional months. Sporting the military-inspired style in green gives your wardrobe of basics the fresh update it needs.

Q. I've got broad shoulders. If I buy a dress shirt that fits my arms, it's always puffy around the waist. What should I do?

A. The tough answer: pay a visit to your tailor. He can take in the waist if your shirt fits in the arms and shoulders. The better answer: find brands that make options cut for broader guys, such as Hugo Boss's "sharp fit" shirt or Thomas Pink's Athletic Fit shirt. It shows off your work at the gym when you have to be at actual work.

Q. Are there ideal pants for travelling? I want to be comfortable on the plane and still look good when I land.

A. Ah, the elusive dignity: maintaining travel pants. Instead of wearing sweat pants or scrunching into jeans, opt for crease-resistant pants with stretch and a flexible waist made for travelling with ease.

Q. This year, I'm ditching my briefcase, since it's falling apart. Should I just get a replacement?

A. We'd suggest going for a hybrid instead. The way we move through the world now requires a durability that a leather briefcase can't quite offer. Plus, thanks to our phones, we need both hands free most of the time. The solution: a backpack in strong technical nylon that can flip to briefcase mode as you glide into the office. This backpack has a built-in compartment for your power bank that connects to a USB socket, so you can charge your devices whether you're stuck in morning traffic or sitting in a meeting.

Q.

What else is there besides a blazer that can keep me warm if I run out for a coffee?

A. Warmthwise, a thin blazer isn't going to do much for you in the winter months. And if you find yourself in a casual office, it can even look out of place. Which is why a neutral, lined suede jacket works best. It's dressy in a best-dressed-at-a-start-up kind of way, and still functions as a warm layer for coffee runs.
