The Only Three Bags You Need

When you're creating a personal style, it's easy to focus on the big features, like shirts, jackets and pants. But don't forget the little touches – like the hint of colour where you least expect it, or a small contrast that adds something unique.

1. Hands-Free Hauling

Get a bag that works at the gym or office.

BACKPACK R1 889 TOPMAN

2. A Weekend Away

Pack what you need for your long weekend coming up.

DUFFEL R9 999 TUMI

3. The Office

Show you mean business with a briefcase.

Embrace Synthetics

Fabrics like polyester and spandex have come a long way since the Richard Simmons era. They're now used in fitness and respectable office attire – jackets, button-ups and trousers. Always check the labels: go with items that stretch and are machine washable to minimise your dry-cleaning bills.

RULE

17

Work It Out

Build your body and your rep: wear wicking fabrics to stay dry. If you wear cotton, you'll be soaked, which is just gross.

Breezy but bold

While it's advisable to keep your outfits sensibly light on layers and fabrication, you don't want to look scraggly or ethereal. Stick to basic combinations in breathable and climate-conscious materials. Then add power by blocking dark and light colours; or by introducing bold horizontal stripes.

Print Is Personal

- This is a look you can easily master. Start by coordinating the size of the shirt's print with the size of your body. A man with a slight build looks natural in a shirt with smaller patterns, while a guy with a more muscular or stocky frame will benefit from a larger design. Follow this rule when you want to fit in, and break it when you're ready to be noticed.
